REPORT ON NATIONAL WEBINAR "PROSPECTS OF FLORISTIC DIVERSITY IN NORTH-EAST INDIA"

During the ongoing Covid-19 crisis, when all the educational institutions remained closed with the only remaining option for virtual classes and meet, the Department of Botany, Morigaon College, Morigaon, Assam, successfully conducted a National Webinar themed – "PROSPECTS OF FLORISTIC DIVERSITY IN NORTH-EAST INDIA", through virtual mode on 26th June 2021. This was undertaken with the sole purpose to keep students active during the grim pandemic situation as well as increase their knowledge and efficiency towards botanical science.

The webinar was jointly coordinated by- Mr. Ankur Jyoti Borah, Asst. Professor Department of Botany, Mr. Trideep Chetia, Asst. Professor, Department of Botany and Miss. Luisma Bordoloi, Asst. Professor, Department of Botany, along with Mr. Bulbul Das, Asst. Professor and HOD, Department of Computer Application as technical assistance. The national webinar came live at approximately 10:30 am on 26th June 2021 through the google meet platform with the inaugural talk delivered by Mr. Jagat Ch. Saikia, HOD, Department of Botany, Morigaon College. Emphasizing the vast diversity of flora and fauna in the northeastern region of India, he expressed the importance for people to understand its significance and the huge possibilities for application as resources of nature. With more than 80 students and personals from different colleges and institutes from Assam, as well as of different northeastern states and across gathered under the event to listen to the two invited resource persons – (1) Prof. Partha Pratim Baruah, Department of Botany, Gauhati University and (2) Dr Rajib Gogoi, Scientist E, Regional Head, Sikkim Himalaya Regional Centre, Botanical Survey of India.

Prof. Baruah was the first resource person to deliver his talk on "Ecological prospects of diversity in N.E India". Through his talk, he beautifully provided an understanding of the ecological balance in nature, the diversification of our ecosystems and how every organism is connected all together in the environment. He explained to the participants how ecological balance persists naturally and how human activities have hampered this pristine natural system. To end his talk, he familiarized and explained the concept of phycoremediaton and its potential towards ecosystem restoration. Following Prof. Baruah, Dr Rajib Gogoi talked and shared his insight on "Eco-tourism and its prospects". He persuaded the need for ecotourism in North East relating how Sikkim has been benefited through ecotourism. Through photographs, he enlightened how beautiful North east India is with numerous endemic plants species including from different orchid to other flowering plants that grow only in some regions of the regions. Being one of the major biological hotspot regions of India, North East is a land of scenic beauty and has a tremendous capacity to be opened for eco-tourism, inviting tourists both as a gateway destination as well as research works from all over India and abroad, he argued.

All of the participants present in the webinar were highly influenced by the talks of both the resource persons increasing their inquisitiveness towards the topics and the long discussions sessions after the lectures showed the pieces of evidence. The webinar was concluded with the vote of thanks delivered by Mrs. Ami Devi, Associate Professor, Department of Botany, Morigaon College. The webinar ran for about 2 hours 45 minutes and was announced to have ended at about 1:45 pm on the same day.
