Topic: Traditional Techniques Used in Fish Drying (RM)

Resource person: Dr. Kamal Ch. Bhuyan

Date: 24/04/23

The workshop on "Traditional Techniques Used in Fish Drying" provided a comprehensive insight into age-old practices for both graduation and master's students. Held on 25/04/23 at Department of Zoology, the seminar focused on the traditional methods employed in fish drying, shedding light on indigenous techniques that have stood the test of time. Dr. Kamal Chandra Bhuyan, Rtd. Assoc. Prof. Morigaon College elucidated the significance of sun-drying, smoking, and salting in preserving fish, considering ecological and cultural contexts. Attendees, including students from undergraduate and postgraduate programs, actively engaged in discussions on the sustainability and efficacy of these traditional techniques. The seminar not only enriched participants' understanding of fish preservation but also fostered an appreciation for the cultural dimensions embedded in these practices. This event served as a valuable educational experience, prompting students to consider the synergy between traditional knowledge and modern advancements in the realm of fisheries and food preservation.
