Decoding the Estrous Cycle: "A Workshop on Techniques and Applications in Rodent Reproductive Research"(RM)

Resource person: Prof. Jogen Ch. Kalita

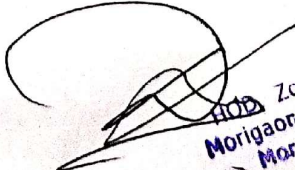

Date:24/11/22

Department of Zoology, Morigaon College organized a Workshop on "Techniques and Applications in Rodent Reproductive Research" proved to be an enriching experience for graduation and master's degree students in the biological sciences. This specialized workshop focused on equipping participants with advanced skills and insights into rodent reproductive research. The introductory sessions provided a comprehensive understanding of rodent reproductive anatomy, physiology, and the intricacies of the estrous cycle. Practical, hands-on training sessions covered techniques such as hormonal assays, estrous cycle monitoring, and experimental design for reproductive studies. The workshop emphasized ethical considerations in reproductive research and delved into the latest technologies and advancements in the field. Graduation and master's students gained valuable knowledge applicable to a range of research areas, including fertility studies, genetic manipulation, and broader reproductive biology. The workshop's combination of theoretical discussions, practical demonstrations, and interactive sessions prepared students for conducting sophisticated and ethically sound research in rodent reproductive science, providing a solid foundation for their academic and professional pursuits.
