The National Seminar on Economic Zoology and Sustainable Development, conducted for graduation and master's students, proved to be a pivotal forum for academic enrichment and knowledge exchange. Held on [29/12/2021-30.12.2021] at [Morigaon college], the seminar centered on the critical intersection of economic zoology and sustainable development. Attendees, comprising undergraduate and postgraduate students, were exposed to a diverse range of topics, including the economic impact of zoological research on various sectors, biodiversity conservation, and practical applications in sustainable practices. The event featured engaging sessions with expert speakers, student presentations showcasing cutting-edge research, and practical workshops. This seminar not only facilitated academic dialogue but also inspired students to appreciate the essential role of zoology in achieving economic growth while fostering environmental sustainability. The collective discussions and insights garnered from the seminar are poised to leave a lasting impact on the academic and professional pursuits of the participants.
